

Quassel IRC - Bug #1231

New PMs from other users don't trigger notifications

Description Using quassel and quassel-core 0.9.0 and OS X 10.8 Mountain Lion.  If a user mentions my nick in a channel, I get a handy little notification to let me know I've been mentioned. But if a user starts a new private message with me, or responds to a conversation I'm having with them, Quassel doesn't provide me with any kind of notification. I don't know if this is intended behaviour or not (I assume not, because most IRC clients do provide notifications for these kinds of events), but as the sole administrator of a small IRC network I find it important to be notified if someone is sending me a PM (as it usually means they are looking for help).  Suggested resolution: provide (optional) notifications for new private messages or when someone has responded in a private message.
