Description

when somebody sends me a private message, quassel just opens a new node in the server's list:

i've never ever managed to see it. people always have to tell me, they have contacted me in the public channel.

would it easy to add a warning (pop up) like when somebody writes me a message in a normal channel?

i'd probably want to be notified for every messages coming in, like when somebody puts my name in a normal message.
messages which come in sequence (every 10 seconds) should not be notified.

have fun.

Quassel has had notifications for some time now. By default, highlights and PMs will send an OS notification, and there are third-party notification modules, to send notifications to a smartphone or other device. I suspect that this feature request just got overlooked during the implementation of these features.

If the current notifications system does not meet your needs, please feel free to open a new feature request addressing your specific needs.
