Description
When enabling the per-chat history in 0.6.0rc1, I see an odd behavior.
Switch to a channel, type /me whatever.
It sends it to the channel as if it was quoted. Ie, you see "/me whatever" in the channel literally.
After that first time it seems to behave fine.
So, there seems to be a bug where it's not seeing /commands the first time you do something in a channel or when switching around. I will try and see if there are any other cases. Thanks for implementing per-chat history! ;)

Additionally, folks with other clients are reporting odd characters in my output:

```
16:51:31  nirik | ]ok, thats just bizzare. ]
16:53:46  nirik | ]huh? ]
16:54:40  nirik | ]ah ha. ]
```

it's putting ] around my output. :(

I am not able to reproduce this. What build do you use and what OS?

I'm using a self built rpm with Fedora 12.

It's using the 0.6.0-rc1 tar.gz

I can try and isolate it more today... perhaps it's related to another setting?

Will do some more testing and get back to you.

ok. More news here, just did some testing.

The core of the problem seems to be that I had a italic font set for my input widget, this causes it sometimes to send ] and confuse things.

To duplucate:

- Go to configure -> input widget -> custom font. Check the box and set it to a font thats 'italic' and apply.

- Go to a channel and type something, but don't hit return.

- Go to another channel and first thing type '/me actions' in input and hit return. I think it's sending '['/me actions']' For just that line. It then goes back to normal in that chat.

So, the workaround is: don't do bold/italic custom fonts in input.
But it seems like it's somehow picking that up after a change and sending it out.

Can you see it based on that?
